Gillian Wearing connecting lives behind glass with her global film project

Gillian Wearing says that

"I really like the idea of an international project that acknowledges our sense of how small the world feels through the internet and social media. Now you can make global collaborative works. If I went and filmed views around the world, it just wouldn't be that interesting. Everyone brings something unique to it, and most importantly they are views I wouldn't have been able to imagine or even have access to.

There is always something compelling about looking at things as they really are, without special lighting or acting. I love Google Earth for the same reason, that you can visit parts of the world that are temporarily held in aspic. In this film, the surprise is that you can be transported from one part of the world to another, from summer to spring, from a quiet forest to a busy urban street."
